Willie the Office Boy
Says--"Yesterday
Was a Pip."

And today was a pippin. The yellow boys with Uncle Sam's brand on em just rolled in. I never thought there was so much coin in the whole world.
The boss sure looked happy—but you should have seen the happy looking customers. Just as soon as the front doors were opened the selling began and lasted until the balloon went up at closing time, and the boss bought me a bottle of ginger ale. It was a case of blue suit boxes going both ways on Fort street. Sell 'em? Why, we didn't need to, they just picked out the suits and handed the money to the cashier and he worked like a runaway adding machine in a real bank. I told the boss to put on the soft pedal and slow up on the $11.65 suits and he told me to "shut up kid; if you talk back to me I'll fire you sure, who's running this store, anyhow?" Well, they're sliding out so fast that if it keeps up we won't have anything to sell, and then suffering Moses! I might lose my job for sure, and if you want a good suit for a little money get it quick—and this is straight Durham with the tag and label off —Yes, I am still on the job at
